Winning junior get-of-sire by R&J Austin 13. Exhibited by R&J, Backgate Angus, Rolex Breeders and Meng Farms.

Roger and Lisa Steele and family of Leatherstocking Farm, Easton, N.Y., made Denver headlines again. Last year they handed over a $1.5 million check for High Voltage; this year they brought him to the Hilton and Brown Palace lobbies for champagne receptions and a special semen offer. Steeles also purchased the foundation heifer and boosted the account by $20,000.

Leatherstocking Adds $20,000 to Foundation

Robert and Lisa Steele of Leatherstocking Farm, Easton, N.Y., began their support of the National Junior Angus Assn. in a big way. They purchased Rosella Eileenmere 454 and the appealing package deal for $20,000 during the National Western Angus Sale.

The March 1984 Cracker Jack Brutus 512 daughter was donated by Gail and Krystal Erdmann, Wetonka, S.D., in memory of the late LeRoy Erdmann. The package accompanying this pick of the Erdmann calf crop also included embryo transplant services and recipient cows for four guaranteed pregnancies, all donated by B&L Ranch, Shawnee, Okla. Semen of 13 different bulls was available for selection to be used in the transplant package. (Leatherstocking chose High Voltage.) In addition, Harding & Harding of Geneva, Ill., had issued $50,000 coverage on the heifer for four and one-half months prior to Denver and extended it to 30 days after the sale. The Baldrige Place, North Platte, Neb., donated their services of feeding and fitting the heifer from October until sale day.

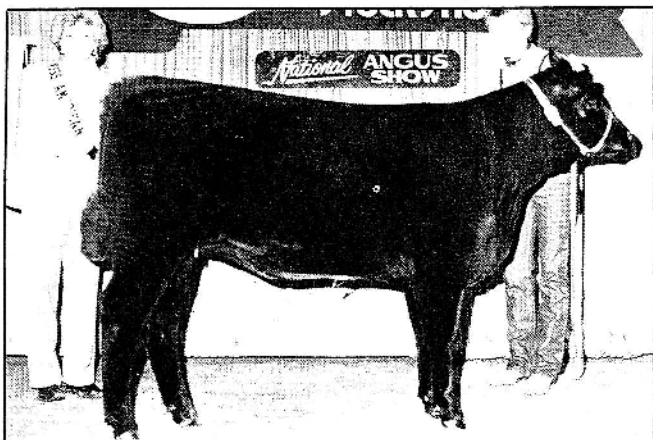

The Angus Foundation is a non-profit organization which supports youth activities, education and research while supporting the National Junior Angus Assn. board of directors.

Eric Zehr, Flanagan, Ill., exhibited the junior show grand champion, Harmon Black Lady 1935. The 1-7-84 QLC Winchester daughter won over the 19-head judged by Mark Richardson.

Teresa Dow, Rockford, Ill., led out the reserve grand champion heifer, making an Illinois clean-up in the junior show. Her entry was HAF Miss Magic 13, a 1-15-83 daughter of Ken Caryl Mr Angus 8017.

Grand Champion Sale Bull
HF Imprint

Exhibitors: Northcote Angus Farm and Huntingdon Farm Buyer: Tomil Ranches

After earning the grand champion slap from judge Steve Simmons on Thursday afternoon, this senior bull calf winner earned a $9,000 bid Friday from a Canadian operation.

The 10-9-83 Premier Independence KN son out of HF Enchantress 167 (a Columbus Adventure 310 daughter in the Huntingdon herd) weighed in at 1,234 lb. and already boasts of several Eastern show wins. Last summer he was bull calf champion of the Virginia Angus Breeders' Show and the Virginia State Fair, then collected the light purple at the Eastern National Livestock Show and the Pennsylvania Angus Breeders' Show.

The time was new. The place was new. And a few new twists spiced up the action, too. The result? An overflow crowd, lots of excitement and impressive averages from all angles.

When the final gavel fell at this year's National Western Angus Sale, 49 lots had grossed over $400,000 to average $8,354, up nearly $4,000 from last year's solid mark. Five flushes and special matings—including future offspring from the recently crowned grand and reserve grand champions of the National Angus Show—led the tally with an $18,000 average, followed by nine embryos at $12,000, 29 bulls at $6,116 and six females at $5,500.

Sponsored by the American Angus Assn., but co-managed for the first time with the American Angus

Hall of Fame, this year's sale took on a new look. It was held in the Beef Palace Auction Arena (rather than the Stadium Arena, as in past years) immediately after the female show. Bulls were judged by Steve Simmons of Omega Farms, Williamston, Mich., Thursday morning. The timing was an improvement and the location reduced distractions, but there was a problem—space. Even though folks filled each seat, covered every step and stood several rows deep in the aisles, the crowd still oozed out into the stall area.

It seems plenty of buyers were able to find a spot in the arena, though. Auctioneer Craig Conover kept the action rolling, cracking off a long string of five-figure prices and scattering the royally-bred offering across North America.

Reserve Grand Champion Sale Bull and High-Selling Bull SVF General George

*Exhibitor: Sunny Valley Farm
Buyer: Genel Angus*

This maternal brother to the popular SVF Pistolero was a favorite in the sale as well as in the show. Judge Steve Simmons first gave him a nod as junior bull calf champion and then as reserve grand champion, and a day later Genel Angus followed with an even more meaningful stamp of approval in the form of a $33,000 bid on full interest and possession.

The 3-28-84 show prospect is out of Blackbird of SVF 0370, a PS Power Play daughter who has earned a solid reputation in the Sunny Valley herd by producing SVF Bandido and SVF Imprint as well as Reno's 1984 champion, "Pistolero."

High-Valued Bull Premier Illini

*Exhibitors: Premier Angus Inc. and David Rincker
Buyers: Royal Farms and Willavar Farm*

Premier Illini, reserve junior champion of the sale show, pegged the evening's highest value when a pair of Saskatchewan operations, Royal Farms and Willavar Farm, bid $30,000 for two-thirds interest and two-thirds possession after his appearance at the Houston Stock Show.

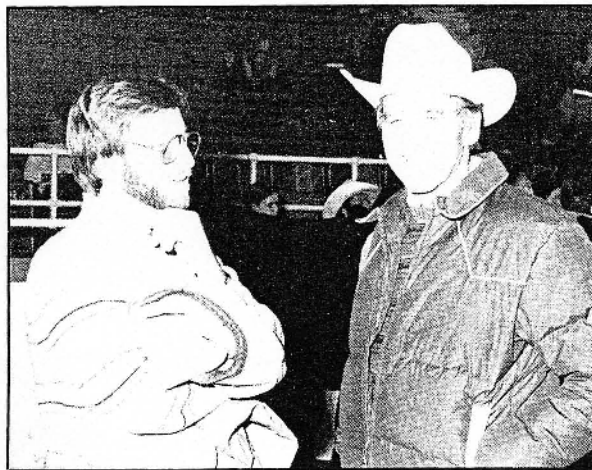

The 3-13-83 Pine Drive Big Sky son collected purple at several shows last year and boasts of a weaning weight ratio of 114. He tipped the scales to 1,810 lb. on show day in Denver.

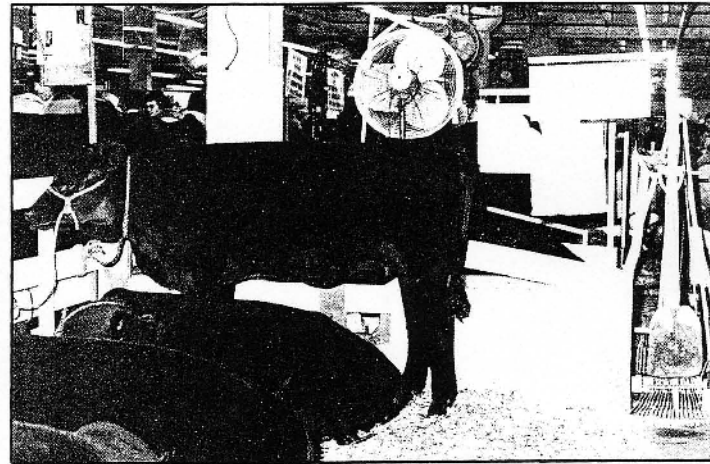

Royalty waiting in the wings.

These men represented the "Angus Boosters," an enthusiastic group that will support premiums at the National Junior Angus Show with $1,400 ($1,000 will go to the heifer division and $400 to the steer division). From left, they are Paul Grinde, Paul Stewart, Bob Weaver, Dr. Jim Davis and Floyd Dievert.

Wayne Strawn of Sunny Valley Farm, Yorkville, Ill., and Bob Thomas, Baker, Ore., were probably talking about SVF Pistolero calves.

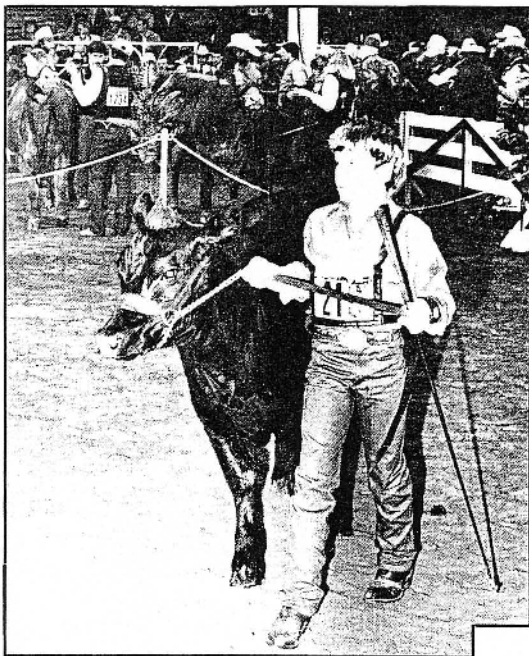

Doug Davis & Sons, Bedford, Va., set up shop on the hill at Denver for the 50th year last month. It was Herefords first for Doug, then Charolais and now Angus. He led out the grand champion 4-H steer in 1935, reports his wife. She's often a spectator at Angus shows, but sons Bob and Bill help with the fitting.

The James Moxley family of Dawn Acres, West Friendship, Md., added their smiles to those of the Huntingdon Farm crew when HF Duchess 451 was named spring heifer calf champion. Moxleys bought the heifer just a few days before the show.

Brent Adams, Wetmore, Colo., was a proud local exhibitor.

This group was checking out the action at the scales. From left are Martin and Mary Jorgensen, Ideal, S.D.; the Association's John Crouch; and Bonnie and Herb Valentine, Gainesville, Ga. Valentines and Jorgensens were in Denver for the Performance People meeting.

Dr Spock was easy to spot in the yards—a sign proclaimed him "King of Sires" and this display tempted visitors with a special semen offer.

Darrell Silveira and Rick Blanchard of Silveira Bros., Mendota, Calif., plot strategy for "Fallon." It must have been good—she was named winter heifer calf champion.

Rick Bourdon, Fort Collins, Colo., and Bob deBaca, Huxley, Iowa, covered systems analysis and retained ownership, respectively, during a meeting of the Performance People. deBaca publishes the Ideal Beef Memo and Bourdon, a Red Angus breeder and CSU staffer, is author of the Journal's Beef Cattle Breeding series.

Carcasses of a set of Angus heifers exhibited by Tom Reynolds, Longmont, Colo., were named reserve grand champion in the National Western's fed beef contest. The heifers had an average 1,050-lb. live weight, 2.75-lb. weight per day of age, 667-lb. warm carcass weight, 2.43 yield grade, and low Choice quality grade. The Tom Reynolds family is pictured.
