Angus exhibitors from across the country paraded 268 females and 96 bulls at the 2000 National Western Stock Show (NWSS) Super Roll of Victory (ROV) Angus Show Jan. 12 and 14 in Denver, Colo. Lead judge Randy Daniel of Colbert, Ga., and his associate, Quintin Smith of Lebanon, Tenn., evaluated the 364 entries before selecting champions during the two-day show.

Famous 7001 captured the grand champion bull title after first winning the senior division. Brockmere Farms, Brookfield, Mo.; Summitcrest Farms, Summitville, Ohio; and Roth Angus, Freeman, S.D., own the Jan. 1997 son of SAF Fame.

Northern Improvement 4480 GF captured reserve grand champion bull honors for Goldberg Farms, Fargo, N.D.; Express Angus Ranch, Shawnee, Okla.; and Whitestone-Krebs, Gordon, Neb. The March 1998 son of TC Stockman 365 first topped the junior division.

In the female show, BT Everelda Entense 166H claimed the grand champion title. Stewart Kincaid, Hardin, Mont., owns the Feb. 1998 daughter of BT Ultima 75E. She first won junior champion female.

TJ Poppy T522, a March 1998 daughter of OGL Battle Cry 427 128, walked away with reserve grand champion female honors. Jamie Schroeder, Douglas, Wyo., owns the entry. She first won reserve junior champion female.

A complete list of winners follows.

When he was a young boy, Tim Fitzgerald's life revolved around cattle and the showing. Showing cattle was simply a way of life.

Back in his early days, Tim held the important job of scratching the show cattle while they were being clipped. Perched atop a bucket in their barn with a showstick in his hand, he quickly realized there had to be more to showing cattle than this.

When he turned 8 years old, his father let him show for the first time. The ease, finesse and confidence he possessed in the showing was second-nature.

In 1985 he won the coveted National Angus Showmanship Contest. Now, 15 years later, he has achieved one of the most distinguished honors in the Angus breed—Herdsman of the Year.

The Herdsman of the Year is selected by ballot during the Herdsman's Banquet at the National Western Stock Show (NWSS) in Denver. Selection is based on personality, ambition and cooperation with show management and breed-association personnel. The winners do not necessarily have to exhibit the best cattle; rather they are respected by others for their ability to fit cattle for the showing.

"I was stunned when I received this award," says Fitzgerald, who is the show and sale cattle manager at Whitestone Farm, Aldie, Va. "I was truly honored in the company at the banquet that considered me for Herdsman of the Year."

To those who know Fitzgerald, this award came as no surprise.

"He's as motivated as anyone I've ever seen in this business," says George Lemm, owner of Whitestone Farm. "He's a great role model. He encourages young people to get into the Angus business and make a livelihood out of it."

Fitzgerald began working for Whitestone Farm after he graduated with a degree in animal science and business from Oklahoma State University (OSU) eight years ago. He now oversees the show cattle at Whitestone

Farm. His responsibilities include clipping, fitting and feeding. He also hires help for the shows and is involved with the setup and organization of Whitestone's sales.

When he's not working with the show and sale cattle, he helps make culling decisions for their cow herd.

"Each year my goal at Whitestone Farm is to have the best set of show cattle in the country," Fitzgerald says. "I also want to have one of the highest averaging sales around."

In order to reach these goals, he sets high standards for himself. From the barn's appearance to his own, Fitzgerald strives to keep things in order. His father, Jerry Fitzgerald, says his son believes in organization and plans things in advance to prevent crises.

"He tries to be perfect," his wife, Andrea, says. "He's always looking for the next task he needs to accomplish. He has a natural work ethic like his father. If something needs to be done, he does it."

A major key to Fitzgerald's success today has been the mentoring he's received by his father and others when he was a junior Angus member.

"My father has been my greatest teacher and supporter," Fitzgerald says. "He's a great stockman and evaluator of cattle. He shares the same passion for cattle as I do."

Fitzgerald grew up watching his father manage Windy Acres in Harrison, Neb. At Windy Acres he was surrounded by great role models, including Mike Nelson, who showed Fitzgerald how to break calves to lead and how to work with cattle.

"Sam Woody was another strong influence in my life," Fitzgerald says. "He has clipped cattle for my family for more than 20 years. I've learned more from him about fitting than anyone. He's always believed the best way to fit cattle is naturally."

Fitzgerald holds true to that same principle today. He also believes fitting is similar to a competitive sport.

"When you're at these big shows, there is truly an art to fitting," he says. "Sometimes the better-fitted cattle prevail at the shows even if they aren't as good. It's an incentive to constantly improve as a fitter."

When Fitzgerald isn't busy fitting cattle at shows, he can be found near the showing with his two boys, Brody, 3, and Bryce, 1½. "I feel it's important to have my family with me at the shows," he says. "This business has always been family-oriented to me. I want to spend every spare moment I have with them when I'm not working with the cattle."

Andrea says that it's not always easy to take two young boys to the shows, but both she and Tim feel that it is worth it.

"We believe strongly in raising our children in the Angus industry," she says. "We have confidence in the National Junior Angus Association and feel that it offers many opportunities for our kids to grow, not only as showmen, but also as leaders. To deprive your kids of those opportunities is negligent parenting."

Clayton Wieben, 20, Waterford, Va., says Fitzgerald's family comes first.

"He calls his wife every night when they aren't with us at a show," Wieben says. "His family is part of it."

Wieben met Fitzgerald four years ago after purchasing a steer from Whitestone Farm. During the past four years Fitzgerald has helped Wieben learn everything from breaking a steer to lead to fitting show cattle to showing a champion.

"I respect him so much for what he has been able to accomplish," Wieben says. "He always takes time to help out younger showmen. He's taught me everything I know."

Fitzgerald encourages junior Angus members to have patience and to work hard to achieve their goals.

"I've been showing cattle for many years," he says. "I think if you've been in the industry long enough and worked hard enough, your dues finally get paid. Everyone gets a turn. I'm lucky that this time it was mine."

Foundation Heifer Package Generates $90,000

A standing-room-only crowd of Angus enthusiasts and supporters from across the country gathered Thursday, Jan. 13, in Denver, Colo., for an opportunity to bid on the 2000 Angus Foundation Heifer Package. Leon and Cynthia Heron of KMK Acres, Thompsons Station, Tenn., and Lawson Hembre, Sugar Hill Farms, Ozark, Ark., purchased the package, including the bred heifer Davis Polly 8506, for $65,000. The two ranches immediately donated back five guaranteed pregnancies from this female, which sold to Kahn Cattle Co., Rydal, Ga., for $25,000.

Davis on the Highlands, including Joe, Sandra, Ashley and Anne Nicole Davis, Springfield, Ky., donated the Jan. 1998 daughter of DHD Traveler 6807. This year's heifer is the first bred heifer to be offered as a Foundation Heifer. She is bred to Sitz SLS Rainmaker 7596 with a projected March calving date.

In addition to the heifer, the package includes 30 days of insurance provided by American Live Stock Insurance, transportation provided by Lathrop Livestock Transportation, a flush and implantation of three embryos provided by Trans Ova Genetics, Ivomec® provided by Merial, ViraShield® 5 provided by Grand Laboratories, a 30-day banner ad provided by the Angus Journal's Web Marketing Department, the Angus Information Management Software (AIMS) package provided by the American Angus Association, four straws of SVF GDAR 216 LTD semen provided by Circle A Angus Ranch, Iberia, Mo., and 300 straws of GAR Commitment's semen provided by Belle Point Ranch, Lavaca, Ark.

The proceeds from the sale of the Angus Foundation Heifer Package support youth, education and research. Each year the Angus Foundation provides numerous awards and scholarships to junior members. Last year the Angus Foundation awarded more than $20,000 in scholarships.

The Angus Foundation Heifer Package was initiated in 1980 to raise funds to start the Angus Foundation. Each year the package is sold in conjunction with the Angus activities at the National Western Stock Show.

More than 10,500 youth throughout the United States are members of the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA). For more information about the Angus Foundation or joining the NJAA, contact James Fisher, director of junior activities, at (816) 383-5100.

Lindsey Trosper, NJAA communications director, spoke to the standing-room-only crowd gathered to watch the sale of the Foundation Heifer Package.

Ashley Davis, a former NJAA Board member, expressed his family's belief in the NJAA program and their happiness in donating this year's heifer.

NJAA Board member Garrett Pohlman serves as Angus Foundation director and did much of the legwork to make the sale a success.
