Communications Welcomes Summer Intern

The American Angus Association welcomed a record number of interns to the team this summer. Chloé Fowler, Ono, Calif., arrived in St. Joseph, Mo., this June to serve as the communications intern.

Compiled by Lindsay King, assistant editor, and Chloé Fowler, communications intern

A resident of Ono, Calif., Fowler is a sophomore at California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo. Majoring in agricultural communications with a minor in law and society, Fowler strongly identifies with the school motto: “Learn by doing.” She is excited to continue this outlook with the Association.

Fowler put her skills to the test at the National Junior Angus Show (NJAS) writing news releases and feature stories; as well as shooting photos and video footage of the event. She will also be the boots on the ground for the communications team at the Leaders Engaged in Angus Development (LEAD) Conference in Billings, Mont.

This seventh-generation rancher is no stranger to the Angus breed, raising crossbred commercial cattle with her family.

This upbringing has budded into a respect for how breed associations

Chloé Fowler arrived at Angus in June and will stay until September as a communications intern.

support producers and contribute to feeding the world, one steak at a time.

“I am looking forward to developing my skills with different communication software programs and increasing my knowledge of video production, as well as the travel associated with this internship,” Fowler says. “This breed is so powerful in the industry, and I’m hoping I can develop my communication skills while also building lasting connections within the Association and breed.”

Possessing a passion for communications and policy development, Fowler aspires to a career fusing the two. Her main interest pertains to how policies and laws affect producers. Her dream job: working as a government affairs specialist with an agricultural association.

“Growing up I was surrounded by associations and other member-driven organizations,” Fowler adds.

“I saw the power they had to make a difference, as well as the community-oriented support felt when being part of something larger than myself. It led to my decision to pursue a career where I worked for those same people everyday.”
