

Summer potential

July — the heart of summer. This month is a time for Americans to celebrate our independence, enjoy the outdoors and, of course for Angus enthusiasts, attend the National Junior Angus Show (NJAS).

Goals for summer

With the warm weather and break from school, our summers have loads of potential. Think back to your first week out of school. Did you have certain expectations and goals for your summer?

Walt Stinson

Perhaps you hoped to work extra hard on a calf in the barn and make her into a winner. Maybe you planned to get a summer job. Now think about your summer thus far.

Is your summer break living up to its potential?

Hopefully, you are enjoying summer and your break is living up to its potential. To make it even better, I would like to offer a few suggestions on how to get the most out of your summer:

- ▶ Become an active member of your state junior association. Many of you have already taken this step, so take a leadership role in your association.

Leadership tip of the month:

Leaders bring out the potential of their followers.

- ▶ If you had the opportunity to attend a Raising the Bar, adopt a proactive mind-set to apply the material discussed at the workshop. Your extra effort could be the spark that grows your state association.
- ▶ Try to make as many new friends as possible at cattle shows. A new best friend could be in another state.
- ▶ Lastly, set a few goals that you hope to accomplish before you return to school. Keep the goals in mind and work hard to achieve them.

We have all had the opportunity to dive headfirst into a productive, exciting summer. Make the most of your summer, and help it live up to its potential.

NJAS this month

The NJAS is July 13-19 at the Iowa State Fairgrounds in Des Moines, Iowa. The Iowa Angus and Junior Angus associations have been working hard to put the finishing touches on this year's event, "Christmas in July."

If you can't make the trip to Iowa, watch for results posted daily from the cattle show at www.angusjournal.com/njas.
