

I Am Angus

by Eric Grant

Folded in his father's embrace, young Kaden Armstrong can see his past, future and present.

His parents, Chad and Trista, raise Angus cattle near Harrison, Mont., along the base of the Tobacco Root Mountains.

For them, the long days on horseback anchor one generation to the next, allowing them to show their children the path to a lifetime of raising cattle.

"You know, every day there're moments that you just can't make," Chad reflects. "They just happen. For me, getting up on nice sunny mornings, doing my irrigating and feeding, and being able to take our kids to see the joy in what we do, you know, that's what it's all about."

Adds Trista, "I want my kids to be here with us."
