Relationships

The term relationship is defined as a connection, association or involvement with individuals. Throughout life, we develop a wide array of relationships. In fact, it can be said that we have some type of relationship with each person we interact with in our life. Many times the type of connection people have with one another is termed as professional or personal, and some encompass both aspects.

Cherish relationships

We begin developing relationships at a very young age with our family, and we use this type of connection to gauge other interactions. There are times throughout life when our involvement with others becomes difficult and we end whatever type of relationship we may have had. Some have their heart broken when they break up with their boyfriends or girlfriends. Others struggle with losing friends because they grow apart or move away. High school is often challenging because of relationships.

The process of building and sometimes breaking relationships only makes an individual stronger. Ultimately, there is the definite end of a relationship when death is involved. This can be the most difficult of all to deal with, but it is also a time when you rely on other connections to help you cope.

Through our involvement in the Angus associations, we develop these relationships with individuals all across the country. We have business partners, friends, family, fellow board members, and the list can go on. Without these relationships, these associations would not mean nearly as much as they do. Effective and successful associations are built on strong relationships. These happen between officers, juniors, advisors, adult association members, board members and directors. Plus, they can be formed in any combination. These connections open numerous doors and are often lifelong.

I hope you evaluate the relationships you are a part of, cherish them, and build upon them. You never know what is in store for you, and where your connections will lead!

Leadership tip of the month:

Use relationships with individuals from other states to gain ideas for improvement within your own association. Continue building relationships in your own state and implement new concepts.

K-State names February student of the month

Rebecca Tokach, senior in animal sciences and industry, Saint Anthony, N.D., has been named the February Agriculture Student of the Month by the Kansas

Rebecca Tokach

State University (K-State) College of Agriculture.

Tokach earned the award based on honors she has received, her activities, grade point average, résumé and a short essay. Students are nominated for the award by a College of Agriculture club in which they are an active member. A panel of student leaders, college professors and advisors judge applications.

As part of the honor, Tokach will receive a $100 cash award from the Kansas Farm Bureau.

Tokach is a member of the College of Agriculture Student Council, Agricultural Ambassadors, Block and Bridle, and Collegiate Farm Bureau. She also is a member of the K-State Meats Evaluation Team, College of Agriculture Academic Competition Teams Council, and the Animal Sciences and Industry Academic Quadrathlon.

Tokach said her most significant experience in college has been her involvement with the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA). She has served on the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) members interested in participating in the 2008 NJAA/Angus Journal Photography Contest need to have their entries postmarked by June 1.

NJAA members can enter one photo in each of the four categories: Angus cattle, landscape, people and around the farm or ranch. There will be junior, intermediate and senior divisions based on age.

Judging will be based 60% on creativity, communication power and composition of the photograph. The other 40% will be judged on the technical quality of the photo.

All photos will be displayed at the National Junior Angus Show (NJAS) in Des Moines, Iowa. If space allows, winning photos will be printed in the Angus Journal NJAS coverage.

For more information and additional information, see page 138 of this issue, page 61 of the March Angus Journal, or the NJAA web site at www.njaa.org.

Junior Angus leadership conference set in 'Big Sky Country'

Developing personal leadership skills is one of the most valuable benefits of being a member of the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA). One event that allows members to develop their leadership skills while building friendships to last a lifetime is the annual NJAA Leaders Engaged in Angus Development (LEAD) Conference. This year's LEAD is set for Aug. 1-4 in Billings, Mont.

All juniors 14 to 21 years old are encouraged to attend this year's conference, themed "Take it to the Top." Juniors will have the opportunity to make new Angus friends, learn about current beef industry issues and tour agricultural and historical sites in "Big Sky Country." In addition, the NJAA Board will present interactive workshops that explore the beef industry as well as personal development topics. Tour stops will include prominent auction yards, bull studs, ranches and a rafting trip.

Conference space is limited to 200 participants, so reserve your spot soon. Early registration for juniors, advisors and parents is $175 and due June 15. After this deadline, the rate increases to $200, if space is still available. Registration and release forms are available in the green NJAA information packets that were mailed to all junior members earlier this year and on the NJAA web site.

For more information about LEAD, visit www.njaa.info or contact the Junior Activities Department at 816-383-5100. LEAD is just one of many programs provided to nearly 11,000 youth members of the American Angus Association across the United States. LEAD is funded in part through the Angus Foundation, which supports education, youth and research.
