I love your cover photos when you include kids. They are the next generation of Angus breeders and make us all appreciate why we are raising Angus cattle, to pass on to our future generations.

This photo is of Cooper Robert Miller, a sixth-generation Angus breeder (yes, he owns his own heifer). The best way to warm a calf after a late Minnesota snow storm is to snuggle!

I'm sure you get pictures all the time from Angus breeders across the United States. I'm not going to be any different. I have enclosed a picture of twins born on my place two weeks ago. This picture is just precious, and I don't believe this type of photo opportunity will come by again in my lifetime.

Thanks,
Dean Hill

Angus Photo Tip

Great tribute

Great cover on the May AJ! Congrats to you and the entire AJ production team on a moving tribute to a young man whose courage and faith will forever inspire us.

Best,
