

New display option

Fall sale season will be here before you know it. If you use AAA Login to create custom data sheets or arrange your sale animals in an Animal Set, then this newest addition might be helpful to you. If you sell your bulls, but keep interest in them, there are now different display options for them within AAA Login.

Hide or display

The "Registered Angus Bulls (hide/ display)" feature allows you to hide or display multi-owned bulls from various search results without canceling them. This can include hiding bulls in features like the Registered Herd Inventory and EPDs (expected progeny differences)/$Values of Owned Animals. Additionally, this is useful for bulls for which you own semen interest.

If you do hide certain bulls, they are not hidden forever. On the search menu, if you click search without any criteria, all multi-owned bulls will return. You can narrow down your selection by birth year or tattoo.

Chris Stallo, vice president of operations and former assistant director of Information Systems, says, "We had it requested from a handful of members over the years and decided to implement it."

Most of the features on AAA Login are from requests from cattlemen. If you have ideas on how AAA Login can help your operation, contact the Member Services Department at 816-383-5100. I'm trying a new feature in this month's column. Instead of showing images of how to navigate the Registered Angus Bulls (hide/ display) feature in AAA Login, I made a video to show you instead. Readers of the digital replica can just click the image, or readers of the print version can watch on YouTube by visiting http://bit.ly/1qvmFn5. Let me know what you think, especially whether the video is more helpful than the still images, at kbrown@angusjournal.com.
