► IN THE NEWS

Col. Ray Sims, Raymore, Mo., was approved by the Kentucky State Fair Board, upon the recommendation of the Saddle and Sirloin Committee, as the recipient of the Saddle and Sirloin Portrait Award. The Saddle and Sirloin Portrait Collection, founded in 1903, is unequalled as a collection of oil paintings honoring outstanding leaders in the livestock world during the past three centuries. Today, many of the 340-plus portraits are displayed in the West Hall of the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center (KFEC).

Col. Sims was at the forefront of the auction movement. His auction career spanned 46 years. He traveled throughout the United States, selling for large- and small-scale livestock breeders as well as senators and three U.S. Presidents. He estimates that he worked more than 7,000 auctions.

It is the gallery's tradition to honor one recipient each year in November during the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE). It has been almost 60 years since an auctioneer has received this honor.

Col. Sims has received many honors throughout his career, including induction into the National Auctioneers Association Hall of Fame in 1990. In 1989, the American Angus Association inducted him into the Angus Heritage Foundation. He has been a life member of the American Angus Association since 1951.

Vance Uden was posthumously honored by the University of Nebraska–Lincoln (UNL) Block and Bridle as the 76th member of its Hall of Fame.

The Block and Bridle Hall of Fame honors individuals who have made commendable contributions to Nebraska agriculture through leadership, service, youth projects and community projects. Uden's family owns and operates the TC Ranch. Uden had been a life member of the American Angus Association since 1964.

The Udens hosted 4-H'ers, university students, judging teams and producer groups at the ranch on many occasions. He spoke to UNL classes and was a supporter of 4-H locally and throughout the state. He took particular pride in his support and stewardship through many different avenues of the animal science department.

Uden was a UNL graduate, member of the UNL livestock judging team and Block and Bridle. He was a member of the board of directors for the American Angus Association, member of Nebraska Cattlemen's Beef Association, Nebraska Cattlemen and Kearney/Franklin County Cattlemen and a member and past president of the Nebraska Angus Association.

He was awarded the 2008 Beef Improvement Federation (BIF) Seedstock Producer of the Year, 2008 Nebraska Angus Breeder of the Year, 2007 BIF Seedstock Producer Roll of Excellence, 2005 Inductee into the Angus Heritage Foundation, 1996 Master Breeder of the Year, and 1992 Soil and Water Conservation Steward.

James Coffey of Hustonville, Ky., has been selected to represent the American Angus Association at the 2010 National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) Young Cattlemen's Conference (YCC). The Angus Foundation will sponsor Coffey's registration and travel expenses for the event, scheduled for June 3-10.

YCC allows young leaders the chance to see firsthand and further understand all aspects of the beef industry. Attendees participate in a nationwide tour of the beef production chain.

A partner in Branch View Angus, his family's registered Angus operation, Coffey has excelled in leadership roles throughout his life. With membership in a number of organizations, including the Kentucky Angus Association (KAA) and Kentucky Cattlemen's Association, he has shown his passion for serving the cattle industry. As the chairman of multiple committees within the KAA and a past president of the Central Kentucky Angus Association, it's plain to see his peers recognize his talent as well.

"As a fifth-generation Angus producer, I have always considered it important to be involved in the Angus and commercial beef industries outside our fences," Coffey states. "I'm excited to fulfill the role of an advocate for the beef industry by being involved, having an active voice, participating in educational programs and, above all, by acting in the best interests of the beef producers I represent."

Arlie and Patricia Lohrding, Coldwater, Kan., are one of six couples named Kansas Master Farmers and Master Farm Homemakers for 2009. The award program dates to 1927 and is sponsored by Kansas State University (K-State) Research and Extension and Kansas Farmer magazine. The couples were honored at a banquet March 19. Lohrding 3 Bar Ranch is a member of the American Angus Association.

Married in 1964, Arlie and Patricia purchased the ranch that is the base of their operation in 1989. The ranch covers 11,775 acres, with a few acres devoted to wheat and alfalfa. Nearly 600 head of beef cows, with 1,000 calves, breeding heifers, yearling bulls and breeding bulls comprise the operation. The ranch supplies recipient cows to Gardiner Angus Ranch, Ashland, Kan.

In addition, the Lohrdings offer hunting leases on their ranch and partner with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in a program to restore habitat for the lesser prairie chicken.

In 1979, he partnered with his parents and bought a cattle ranch along the Boise River in Parma, Idaho. It was at this time that he met and fell in love with Debbie Edens, his best friend and devoted wife of 29 years. Jim was an example to his friends and family of a life well-lived, full of honesty, hard work and love.

Jim had a passion for basketball that led to a 10-year period of coaching in the Parma School District, including four years as the girl's varsity coach and three years as the boy's varsity coach.

At the age of 46, Jim bought the old Eden's cabin in Donnelly, Idaho, and for two years, prior to his diagnosis of kidney cancer, he had the time of his life learning to ski at Tamarack. The time spent at the cabin was outdone only by the arrival of his first grandchild.

Don was born March 22, 1945, in Newton, Kan., to Olin and Lorene (Prather) Eby. He graduated from Newton High School in 1963 and from Wichita State University in 1967, earning a bachelor’s degree in business administration. Within months, his mother-in-law began to require more care because of her Alzheimer’s disease. New Feature Added to Cook-Off

This summer at the National Junior Angus Show the All-American Certified Angus Beef® (CAB®) Cook-Off will be accompanied by a new competition — the All-American Certified Angus Beef Chef's Challenge.

The Chef's Challenge is geared much like televised cooking competitions such as the Food Network's "Iron Chef" and will feature two age divisions: adults 21 and older and National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) members, ages 18-21.

Participants must prepare and serve a unique entrée using a specified cut of CAB and secret ingredients — such as vegetables, fruits, herbs, spices, condiments, etc. — provided by contest sponsors and announced by 9 a.m. the day before the challenge.

"It's our intention that the new 'Challenge' contest provide a venue for senior NJAA members and adults who are passionate about cooking and promoting CAB with the ability to be creative while learning to prepare and promote our industry's product," says Anne Lampe, co-chairman of the Auxiliary's Beef Education Committee, which coordinates the Cook-Off and Challenge contests.

The first-ever Chef's Challenge and the Cook-Off will take place simultaneously July 13 during the 2010 NJAS in Denver, Colo. Entries are limited to one or two people, and will be limited to 10 total entries.

Multiple entries from the same state will be accepted in each age division; however, NJAA members may not participate in the Chef's Challenge if they are members of a state Cook-Off team.

Three judges will evaluate the entries, and scores will be based on use of CAB and secret ingredients; taste; originality; plate presentation; and technique and preparation. Contestants will have no more than 1 hour and 30 minutes to prepare their entries.

"We're hoping the Chef's Challenge will spur some excitement among contestants and help turn up the heat in the kitchen," shares CAB Chef Michael Ollier, who will be one of the judges of this year's challenge. "Food is truly a creative outlet, and this new competition is a great way to let the best chefs shine."

The first-place entry in each division will receive a Certified Angus Beef logo jacket and a $100 cash prize.

Visit www.angusauxiliary.com or www.angus.org/njaa for entry forms, complete rules and procedures.

Entry applications are due to contest chairpersons by June 1. Mail or fax entries to Anne Patton Schubert, 4040 Taylorsville Rd.,

Taylorsville, KY 40071; or 502-477-2637.

Entries also may be e-mailed to Anne Lampe at alampe@wbsnet.org or faxed to 620-872-3915.
