New beginnings

Many times, people use New Year's Day as their starting point to create a new beginning and wean themselves from bad habits they have built over a period of time. They call it a "New Year's Resolution." However, as I grew up in the livestock world, New Year's wasn't the beginning of my year; sale season was. The coming of September meant traveling to sales all across the country with my family to find the next "great one."

Sportsmanship

New show heifers meant another try at getting it right, a hope for one with a better attitude, and a chance to learn from all of your previous year's mistakes to become better than ever.

Lauren Grimes

However, it often becomes difficult to remember that a new year doesn't always mean new success.

Today's society has pampered our youth to believe that everybody is a winner. While this is considered ideal to many, it does not prepare our youth for the struggles and tribulations we face in the livestock industry. That dream show heifer may not turn out like you hoped. She may lose her calf. She may not even ever win a show.

While we may not have control over God's greater plan, we have control of how we present ourselves during these moments. A quote by Maya Angelou can be easily applied to the youth of the livestock industry. She said, "People will forget what you said, people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel." I believe in this phrase 110%!

We must win with as much grace as we lose with. We all want that moment of fame, that glamorous ring candid of the judge shaking our hand, and that perfect backdrop picture to hang on our bedroom wall, but the most important part about this process is to remain humble.

Our victories can be taken from us just as quickly as they were given to us, and we as Angus juniors must always remember our duty to serve as positive role models to our peers. They will remember that time you didn't congratulate them when they beat you in showmanship for the first time in their lives, they will remember seeing you throw a yellow ribbon in the trash, but most importantly, they will remember they never want to endorse that image for themselves.

I will be the first to admit I do not like to lose. Who does? We put our blood, sweat and tears into our passion for livestock. However, we must remember everything happens for a reason. God has a plan. Maybe it wasn't our day, maybe our competition deserved that banner more, and maybe our day of victory is right around the corner.

So I urge you to better yourself this upcoming show season. Very few people, if any at all, will remember what place you got in class a year from now. So stay true to your beliefs, win with class, lose with grace and remember the important things in life. As our late Chairman Cory Watt would say, "Do your best, and let God do the rest."

High school students learn to lead the animal science industry

Forty students from six states gathered on the Kansas State University (K-State) campus in June to gain livestock knowledge and leadership skills. These participants comprised two 20-person cohorts of the seventh annual K-State Animal Sciences Leadership Academy (KASLA) June 10-13 and June 17-20 in Manhattan, Kan. Three National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) members, Haley Lindell, Leonardville, Kan.; SaRae Roberts, Hillsboro, Kan.; and Mason Tarr, Sanger, Calif., attended.

Hosted by the K-State Department of Animal Sciences and Industry and sponsored by the Livestock and Meat Industry Council, the academy's goal is to develop young leaders within the livestock industry and prepare them for a successful future in this field.

During their time at the KASLA, students participated in interactive leadership development and educational sessions led by faculty members from across the K-State campus. Participants completed the college experience by bowling at the K-State Student Union, completing the K-State Challenge Course and staying in Haymaker Hall.

The KASLA also included a full day of livestock industry tours throughout northeast Kansas, with stops including O.H. Kruse Feed Innovation Center, Manhattan; Kansas Department of Agriculture, Manhattan; Hildebrand Farms Dairy, Junction City; Sysco Foods, Olathe; Bichelmeyer Meats, Kansas City; and American Royal, Kansas City. They also enjoyed tours of university farms and the College of Veterinary Medicine.

For their final project, the students were divided into groups during the week to focus on current issues affecting the livestock industry. Faculty mentors from the K-State Department of Animal Sciences and Industry assisted each group. Using information they learned throughout the academy, the groups were asked to present their subject as part of the closing reception on the final day. About 100 family, friends and members of the K-State community gathered each week for the closing reception to honor the graduates and hear their thoughts on these important livestock issues.

Application open for beef industry internship in Washington, D.C.

The National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) and the Public Lands Council (PLC) government affairs office in Washington, D.C., is accepting applications for the spring 2016 public policy internship. The deadline to submit an application is Oct. 1, 2015.

NCBA Executive Director of Legislative Affairs Kristina Butts said this is a great opportunity for students with an interest in the beef industry and public policy.

"The internship gives college students the opportunity to work alongside staff on a range of issues that impact U.S. cattlemen and women," Butts said. "The internship is designed to work closely with the lobbying team on Capitol Hill; to assist with NCBA and PLC's regulatory efforts; and to work closely with the communications team."

Producer-led and consumer-focused, NCBA is the nation's oldest and largest national organization representing America's cattle producers. PLC is the only organization in Washington, D.C., dedicated solely to representing cattle and sheep ranchers that utilize federal lands. The organizations work hand-in-hand on many issues, sharing office space in the heart of the nation's capital.

The full-time internship will begin Jan. 11, 2016, and end May 13, 2016. To apply, interested college juniors, seniors or graduate students should submit the application, college transcripts, two letters of recommendation and a résumé to internships@beef.org. More information about the NCBA public policy internship is available on www.beefusa.org.

National Cattlemen's Foundation accepting applications for W.D. Farr Scholarships

The National Cattlemen's Foundation is accepting applications for the W.D. Farr

Scholarships for the 2015-2016 school year. The annual W.D. Farr Scholarship awards were established by the National Cattlemen's Foundation in 2007 to recognize outstanding students who plan to pursue careers in meat science and animal agriculture. Each $12,000 award recognizes superior achievement in academics and leadership, and will allow graduate students to further their study in fields that benefit the cattle and beef industry.

W.D. Farr was the first president of the National Cattlemen's Foundation, and served as president of the American National Cattlemen's Association, which would later become the NCBA. His career spanned 75 years and included innovations in cattle feeding, uniform beef grading, water conservation and banking.

To apply for the scholarship, graduate students planning to pursue a career in meat science or the beef industry should submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, a description of applicant's goals and experience, a statement of belief in the industry, as well as a review of the applicant's graduate research and three letters of recommendation. For more information and to apply, visit <http://nationalcattlemensfoundation.org>.
