

Internships Offered

Association, API offer three internships to students seeking experience with breed associations or breed publications.

by Shelia Stannard

The American Angus Association and Angus Productions Inc. (API) offer summer internships to college students who want to learn more about breed association and publication work. The paid internships last approximately 10-12 weeks. Application deadline is Feb. 1, 2008.

The Association's Communications Department offers an internship to junior- or senior-level students majoring in agricultural journalism or communications who have an interest in the livestock industry. Animal science students with a strong skill set in writing and editing are also encouraged to apply.

Students interested in the communications internship should have completed course work in news and feature writing, as well as editing and photography. The candidate should have experience with livestock shows. Send a résumé and writing samples to Shelia Stannard, director of communications and events.

The Junior Activities Department employs a college student to assist with the planning and execution of junior Angus shows and leadership events. The intern will work closely with various aspects of event planning and should be detail-oriented.

Applicants for the junior activities internship should have an agriculture-related major. Those who can begin the internship around May 20 will be given preference. Any student interested should apply to James Fisher, director of junior activities.

API offers an editorial internship with the Angus Journal and Angus Beef Bulletin to a college junior or senior who is pursuing a degree in agricultural journalism or agricultural communications.

Applicants should have experience with livestock and should have completed the following courses or their equivalents: Reporting I and II, editing, magazine writing or creative writing, and photography or photojournalism. Interested students should send a résumé and writing and photography samples to Shauna Hermel, editor.

For more information about any of these internships, or to submit an application, please contact the individuals listed above at 3201 Frederick Ave., Saint Joseph, MO 64506; or call them at 816-383-5100. Students interested in multiple internships should apply for each individually.
